

Toward a Larger Whole

Instructions: The ultimate goal of this activity is to move you closer to describing your understanding of and personal connection to the broader social purpose or particular societal role of your discipline in contributing to a more just and loving world.

- How would you name or describe your chosen discipline of study or work?

- What do you find to be beautiful about this particular discipline?

- Describe the artistic or creative dimension of your discipline. Where or how is creativity and self-expression relevant or required?

- What might be an image that could help capture your understanding of the social purpose of your discipline or how it contributes to humanity and the common good? (If it is something you can sketch, do so below or on back of this sheet.)

- What might be a good slogan that captures the purpose or social goals of your discipline?

- How do you understand the relationship between your own personal sense of purpose and that of your broader discipline of study or work?
